Ready to Plan your next Alaskan Adventure—see Bear Paw Adventure

Are you ready for your next trip to the Last Frontier? Bear Paw Adventure will help you with your plans. You already know that the fishing at Anchor Point and on the Kenai Peninsula is unbeatable. Bear Paw Adventure will help you get on the fish. But, there are more great things to do in Alaska and many of those are within easy reach of Anchor Point. Just about everyone thinks of bears when you talk with them about Alaska. Although there are some of these big bruins on the Kenai Peninsula, your chances of seeing them are not great. If you want to film and observe these creatures, your best bet is a quick flight across the Inlet to Katmai from Homer. You can make that a day trip, or spend more time if you like.

Another popular activity is marine tours. You can enjoy trips from Homer or Seward. Both are within easy reach of Bear Paw Adventure's Cabins at Mile Post 155 on the Sterling Highway, at Anchor Point, Alaska. Go on line at www.bearpawadventure.com for more adventure choices.

Bear Paw Who?

Reflections on 2003 in Alaska

It seems to me that 2003 just moved by too quickly. I keep thinking about our location at Anchor Point, all the fish that swim by, and how little time I spend trying to catch them. Next year I'm going to spend more time fishing, but I say that every year. We had plans for a cruise on Prince William Sound in the Spring but it didn't happen because of delays in getting the cabin built on the boat. All and all it was a good year and we finished strong with lots of Silvers & Dolly Varden. The Wise Old Hunter

Moose Cabin Changes

Moose Cabin is not just a summer cabin anymore. The porch on the south and west sides of the cabin are being closed in with log and glass. Two of the beds and the dining table from the main cabin will be moved to this area. The extra space in the main cabin will be furnished with some of Bear Paw's handmade log furniture. The water line to the cabin was buried to protect against freezing.

The Kachemak Bay Annual Shorebird Festival

The 12th annual shorebird festival will take place next year in Homer on May 6, 7, 8 and 9. This is a great opportunity for the ardent birders, or for those of us who just want to learn more about nature and the critters we share it with. The sponsors of the group are planning over 50 events and lectures and over 25 species of birds are expected. The open decks on the Wise Old Hunter and Moose Cabin will offer
